Nancy Gannon

Director of Education and Research

Nancy Gannon is a seasoned leader with a focus on curriculum, instruction, and school organization who has worked both locally and nationally.

As director of instructional materials at Student Achievement Partners, Nancy supported districts across the United States in selecting learning materials that connected to their student impact goals. Prior to this role, she was executive director of academic quality for New York City's department of education and led the work to align curriculum and assessment with the state's new standards. In addition, Nancy directed the implementation of a citywide school quality review integral to providing school leaders with coherent, focused approaches to student impact.

In her consulting work, Nancy collaborates with a range of clients on developing leadership pipelines and professional plans, providing content expertise, and deepening instruction across classrooms.

As a teacher, principal, and literacy coach, Nancy has brought a combination of strategic thinking and deep experience to her work helping districts and schools ensure they are effectively serving all students.
